H.E.A.R. finds support from XtremeMac FS1 earphones

Posted on Jan 17, 2006 at 7:08pm by Dennis Sellers

The Hearing Education and Awareness for Rockers Foundation

H.E.A.R., a non-profit organization dedicated to the prevention of hearing loss and tinnitus among musicians and music fans through education and grassroots advocacy, has announced their inclusion in new product manuals from XtremeMac, which makes, among other things, iPod accessories giant.

The companies will participate in new co-branding of the Future Sonics-designed model FS1 hi-definition earphones product materials. Future Sonics has supported the H.E.A.R. Foundation for more than 17 years. In continuing to support hearing education, their new designs are being distributed through a co-branding agreement with XtremeMac that now feature H.E.A.R. in the FS1 product materials along with a more comprehensive warnings about the potential risks from misuse of personal earphone products with portable digital media players.

H.E.A.R. showcases a range of professional personal monitors and professional earphones from Etymotic Research, Future Sonics, Precision Audiometrics, Sensaphonics, Shure, Westone and others. However, Future Sonics and XtremeMac are the first companies to provide this type of visibility for all consumers in this product type's marketplace, reps from the companies say.
